Najam moved to United States at the age of 19 and has acquired lifetime skills of leadership, corporate and entrepreneurship. He has hired, trained, and influenced over 2,700 employees in a 25-year corporate and entrepreneurial career inspiring exponential growth in every position he has held by motivating teams to achieve more with less, setting new productivity records.

As an active real estate developer in Charlotte, NC, Najam deals in single-family and multifamily real estate completing many successful transactions with more in the pipeline.

He was one of the top 50 franchises in the country for nation's 2nd largest tax preparation company in a multi-state operation for 14 years building almost 400 retail locations and has been featured in numerous TV interviews and print media.

As an IT consultant, he was the first 500 MCSE (Microsoft Certified Systems Engineer) in the world recognized by Mr. Bill Gates.

He has run his business with zero employee and vendor complaints and maintained A+ ratings with Better Business Bureau.

Najam has motivated employees, managers, entrepreneurs, politicians, community leaders, and religious leaders alike. His knowledge in conflict resolution, employee relations, soft skills, business etiquettes, networking, and relationship building is extensive and relatable.

He has held many successful fundraisers for community and political leaders including mayors, governors, US senators, and presidential candidates. He was also member of RNC 2020 host committee in Charlotte, NC. He also hosted delegations from China, Dubai, Germany, Ireland, Czech Republic, France, Australia and was part of the Mayoral delegation in 2016 that visited China to improve trade relations.

“How may I be of service?”

Najam was recently given a leadership award at the embassy of Finland by The Consular Corps College.

His philanthropic causes include the ‘Champ Camp for which he received the MICA (mayoral international community award) for global leadership.

As a philanthropist, he supports many different local and international community service organizations and is a member of the Consular Corps College along with the World Affairs Council. He states, “Our legacy is always ahead not behind us” and this is how he approaches every day of his life. He resides in Charlotte, NC with his wife raised three successful children.

TESTIMONIALS

Susanna Black,
Anchor at WSOC-TV Eyewitness News.

"If you get the opportunity to work with Najam, take it. He is a driven, gifted entrepreneur - and meticulous planner. He knows what it takes to reach success before he even begins and always follows through."

Mark Steber,
Chief Tax Officer at Jackson Hewitt

"Najam was a great business owner and one of the flagship leaders for best practices and successful operations. We would routinely reach out to Najam and his enterprise to determine what was going on in the industry and get suggestions for how the overall business should proceed on issues of strategic importance. He understood the balance on franchise operations and franchisees and helped many times negotiate a fair deal"

Mayor Jennifer Roberts, Former Mayor of Charlotte, NC.

"I have had the pleasure of working with Najam Usmani over the past several years in a number of capacities, including organizing and participating in an official trade mission to China when I was Mayor of Charlotte. Najam is an innovator, business executive, and out-of-the-box thinker. His business acumen is sharp, but he also brings warmth and a mission of service to his work. What I have seen Najam really excel at is bringing together a team, whether for business, politics, shared interests, or community."

Wayne Lallman,
VP of Business Development, ScoreVision.

"Integrity is the first word in describing Najam. Intelligent and entrepreneurial are part of his personal DNA. He finds a way to drive success. Not just for himself, but for those fortunate enough to work with him."

REDEFINING HIS AMERICAN DREAM

By Sherri Johnson . Photography by Gerin Choinere & Courtesy of Najam Usmani

How a Boy from Pakistan Became a Man of this Country with an Unstoppable Purpose

Most people who've come to know Najam Usmani, either by way of his gifts or the honor of his company, will tell you that his spirit is contagious. He's a self-proclaimed entrepreneur, who found excellence in his DNA through hard work, determination, and the notion that failure was never an option. This is the story of a man who lived what he thought was the American Dream until he realized instead that his American Dream is tied to his legacy and the unselfish road ahead – giving back and paying forward what he earned and learned over the past thirty years.

EDUCATION

Growing up in Pakistan as the oldest son of eleven children, Najam took on jobs and became a tutor at an early age to help his parents. He dreamed of one day going to America, but when he shared his dream with others, they laughed and said it would never happen. Najam faced the challenge with fearlessness and naive determination.

Najam came to the U.S. from Karachi, Pakistan at the age of 19, where his only reference to the American way of life was the TV sitcom, Perfect Strangers. Minnesota State University Moorhead is not the windy city he'd seen on television, but nonetheless, he settled in to gain an education and pursue the American Dream. He self-funded his education as a finance major and computer science minor, where he bucked the belief that technology is the target. Instead, he felt that it's the people using it, and making business run, who are at the core of everything.

“Human connection is essential no matter how technologically savvy we become,” says Najam. This is a belief that led him toward a lifetime of connections, collaborations and exploration.

After college, he did everything from stocking shelves to selling insurance. Then Najam focused his career on Information Technology (IT); and in 1996, he was one of the first 500 to be named Microsoft Certified Service Engineer (MCSE) by Bill Gates, which allowed his career and income to soar and his focus to shift to a new entrepreneurial spirit. Years later he bought his first Jackson Hewitt Tax Service franchise, which is where he learned that it's people he likes to lead. He built his business on ethics, integrity and handshakes, asking his employees every day, “How may I help YOU?”

“Motivating my employees to help them reach their goals was way more gratifying to me than growing the numbers,” says Najam. “In the end, it was the best thing for the company, too,” says Najam, who multiplied his business to nearly 50 franchises in his people-centric organization.

PHILANTHROPY AND FLIPPING HOUSES

As a side business, Najam began dabbling in real estate. He enjoyed bringing people together to accomplish something tangible. Epic Holdings was not your ordinary real estate company – it was a tightly knit team that moved fast and made a profit – of which five percent was allocated toward community charities.

“We acquired and rehabbed about 50 properties including single-family homes and townhomes in just three years,” says Najam. “We were beautifying neighborhoods, but we were also changing lives.” He trusted and empowered his team to do extraordinary work together and began his practice of giving 5% of the profit to local causes.

According to Najam, he found his purpose through the joy (and success) he realized by helping people. Whether supporting education initiatives from the Governor’s office or serving local charities like Loaves & Fishes, Allegro Foundation...A Champion for Children with Disabilities or Steve Smith Family Foundation, it was more satisfying than any other bottom-line benefit he knew in corporate America. To him, THIS was the American Dream.

IMPACTING THE NEXT GENERATION: CHAMP CAMP

With children of his own, Najam noticed the need for nurturing greatness in young people, specifically high school students. Najam's idea of bringing mentors and high school kids together brought about the birth of 'Champ Camp'. He covers all costs and will be taking the program to colleges and universities, free of charge with plans to register as a 501 (c) organization.

"Champ Camp started to fill a gap in our education system and give kids face-to-face exposure with professionals in all areas of business," says Najam, "They can ask questions at our high octane events, where they dress up and spend the day at a country club meeting mentors."

It wasn't until he was invited to speak at his collegiate alma mater that his purpose grew, and his scope expanded to include college students. He realized that his life learnings could be a big benefit during this critical stage in life - from deciding a career path to being the best employee to grow your career.

Najam stated, "I am now extending Champ Camp to universities because I want young adults to know that having an entrepreneurial mindset doesn't mean you have to fund a start-up. If kids develop that mentality before they enter the workforce, they will take pride, take initiative and set goals as if it were their own business."

Najam is not a motivational speaker nor a life coach, but he does hope that his life events will inspire others to create greatness.

"This is MY American Dream - I want my life to be counted," says Najam, "if we don't invest in our next generation, who will?"

BRINGING BACK THE HUMAN TOUCH

Najam Usmani is a natural-born teacher who loves to share colorful stories and lessons learned from his vast experiences. He found that success comes from being truthful, compassionate, and doing your best at every job. Serving others and seeking win-win solutions has always been his goal. Najam believes that greatness begins with gratitude and is forever grateful for this country. He and his wife Farah were recently awarded the 2018 Mayor's International Community Award for Global Leadership by Charlotte Mayor Vi Lyles.
